Description:

Nestled in the heart of rugged alpine terrain, our extensive tenure features a breathtaking variety of landscapes ideal for any film production. From dramatic mountain peaks and glacier-fed lakes to dense old-growth forests and secluded river valleys, each vista offers a cinematic backdrop that is both visually stunning and truly authentic. Our well-established wilderness guiding company is ready to support productions of any scale—from intimate independent projects to larger, more complex shoots—by providing expert guidance, logistical assistance, and specialized safety services.

Our professional guide team includes varying levels of wilderness experts, up to and including ACMG/IFMGA Mountain Guides. Highly experienced in working in challenging backcountry environments, they bring an unmatched level of skill to every project. Whether your shoot requires technical rigging on vertical cliff faces, rope access over waterfall canyons, or safety management on a glaciated peak, our guides can handle it. Each member is equipped with robust first aid certifications (OFA3 and WFR 80-hour) and a proven track record of safe and efficient backcountry operations.

Whether you need to scout a pristine lake at dawn, conduct an aerial shoot along jagged ridgelines, or capture the drama of a winter storm in the high alpine, our team is here to make your production run smoothly. Our dedication to safety, coupled with unmatched local knowledge, ensures an unforgettable and seamless film experience in some of the most spectacular wilderness locations on the planet.
